“Sensitive about our Sexuality”

*The breasts of a woman.
The hips of a woman.
The vagina of a woman.
The ass of a woman.
Our Necks, our Backs.*

What more do you want from us? The entire female body is subjected to criticism at the hands of our male dominated society. Take that in. The sensitivity and stigmas surrounding the sexuality of women shouldn't even be a conversation, but here we are.

Being a man in this world, must be nice. I mean men aren't the ones being critiqued and torn down by society's rules of sexual expression, are they?

Truth be told, women's sexuality is oppressed critiqued, and subjected to the male gaze. The “traditional role” of a woman is one that is submissive, sacrificing, and selfless.

We hate slavery. But is this traditional role progressive?

We are told to present ourselves in a modest, meek, and a submissive manner.

Women should be allowed to express her true self, her true spirit, and her true sexuality without the negative attention, remarks, and banter.

Let women be who they want to be. Anything but basic however. To be quite frank, this society has failed women. Due to the system of patriarchy, this “sexual stigma” exists. Social constructs are in place that shame, shun, and banish women for being the sexual creatures we are meant to be. And I mean, we are sexy!

But what society does not know is, Sexuality is more than sex. It's expression in fantasies, desires, beliefs, attitudes, values, behaviors, practices, roles, fashion, words, thoughts, and appearance.

Whew. Society wants women to walk around with a Scarlet Letter on her chest for being sexual entities, but it's time for women to take back what's theirs, their sexuality. And not to mention we are here and more present than before. Like the Trump administration, this stigma of classifying women as whores, sluts, classless, or one-dimensional because of their sexual expression needs to cease. Ended. Halted. Destroyed. Abandoned.

This sexual stigma does nothing for the progression of society. It deters women from their true self and creates an imbalance of superiority geared towards males.

When will women be allowed to be women?

Women should just pack their bags and create a society where they aren't condemned for sex appeal, sexual language, or sexy attire.
